Teaching Academy
Independence High School

Students graduate from the program with the skills and courses requisite to enter college and ultimately careers in the teaching profession. Careers can include teaching, child psychology, pediatrics, counseling, preschool teacher or director, social work, or childcare. Students obtain direct teaching experience through field experiences at elementary and middle schools. Pathway features an exemplary instructional team who act as mentors and provide guidance to students throughout the four years of the program. The classes in the Teaching Academy provide opportunities for leadership, working collaboratively with teams of students, and practicing professional level presentation skills.
